Re: Complaint Against Michael Huckabee

Dear Mr. Noble:

3. S.

The Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee ("DSCC"), through undersigned counsel, files this complaint charging violations of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 ("FECA" or the "Act"), as amended, 2 U.S.C. § 431 et seq., and related regulations of the Federal Election Commission ("FEC" or the "Commission"), 11 C.F.R. § 100.1 et seq., by Michael Huckabee.

In sum, publicly available state and federal election campaign records as well as newspaper accounts portray Huckabee as an individual who has disregarded the requirements of the state and federal campaign finance laws. The record contains numerous examples of Huckabee commingling money raised for his state and federal races, and accepting and using state and corporate money to benefit his federal campaign. Unfortunately, the full scope of Huckabee's violations of state and federal campaign finance laws is impossible to determine without further investigation. If, after the Commission has completed such an investigation, it finds reason to believe that Huckabee has violated the law, the Commission should take swift remedial action with regard to violation of federal campaign finance laws, and refer all potential violations of state campaign finance laws to the proper Arkansas state authorities.

Huckabee has a history of indifference to federal and state campaign finance laws and sloppy recordkeeping. For example, in response to a recent complaint that

¹ The allegations in this complaint are based on published news accounts, FEC reports and other publicly available information. Copies of those materials that are principally relied upon are attached.

Huckabee had illegally accepted corporate contributions for his Senate election campaign, a Huckabee spokesman told the media that the corporate contributions were intended to retire Huckabee's debt from his 1994 race for Arkansas Lieutenant Governor. In other words, Huckabee's defense for having accepted corporate contributions for a federal election was that the contributions, which were solicited for and received by his federal campaign committee, should have, in fact, been solicited for and received by his former state committee.

A recent article in the Arkansas Times entitled "Huckabee Gets a Bipartisan Scolding" provides further insight and details into Huckabee's past problems. For example, in addition to detailing a number of violations of Arkansas state campaign finance laws, the article notes that in 1995, Huckabee had his Lieutenant Governor's campaign pay the expenses for him and his campaign aide, Brenda Turner, to travel to Washington, D.C. According to the article, the trip was taken "in part to explore his Senate prospects." Commission regulations make clear that "only funds permissible under the Act may be used for such [testing the waters] activities." 11 C.F.R. § 100.8(b)(1)(i). In this instance, Huckabee has acknowledged that he used state campaign funds -- which are not permissible under the FECA -- to fund his "testing the waters" activities. Indeed, section 110.3(d) of the Commission's regulations specifically prohibits the use of state campaign committee funds in connection with federal elections.

Similarly, in July 1995, the Arkansas Democrat Gazette reported that Huckabee was prepared to form an exploratory committee because "of the 'incredible' response he has received to letters sent to Republicans across the state asking if should run for the Senate." In fact, several weeks later, Huckabee did form such a committee. However, Huckabee's FEC reports failed to show any expenses related to the mailing referenced in the newspaper article. Not surprisingly, news reports state that Huckabee spent $3,000 in printing and $5,000 in "office supplies" from his state campaign account in the month of July. It thus appears that Huckabee may have used state campaign funds to finance "testing the waters" activities for his inevitable Senate run, in violation of federal law.

The violations noted above are consistent with Huckabee's history of sloppy bookkeeping. For example, a May 5, 1992 letter from the Commission's Reports Analyst Division to the Huckabee campaign cites numerous examples of missing or improperly reported information. A follow-up letter on May 28, 1992 also alludes to incomplete reports and Huckabee's inability to correctly state the total of the contributions his campaign had received. In December 1992, the Reports Analyst

Division again sent a letter to the Huckabee campaign, this time noting that the campaign had not responded to the FEC's previous letter requesting more complete information on three prior disclosure reports. It is precisely this attitude that caused a bipartisan state ethics panel that included former Huckabee campaign workers to find that Huckabee's state campaign records were "inaccurate."

In addition to the violations noted above, Huckabee's 1996 Senate campaign has already filed 1995 year-end FEC reports that list 44 donors without their occupations identified. Furthermore, there is no evidence that Huckabee or his campaign has complied with the Commission's "best effort" requirements. See 11 C.F.R. § 104.7(b).

Already, in response to a complaint filed earlier this month, Huckabee has acknowledged that his campaign accepted illegal corporate contributions. Instead, Huckabee appears to have shown indifference to the FEC's prohibitions, limitations, and reporting requirements. There is no better evidence of this than the Audit Division's numerous correspondence with Huckabee's 1992 Senate campaign. In order to prevent a replay of those events, and in order to remedy past violations of the Act, the undersigned requests the Commission to undertake a full and comprehensive investigation of Huckabee and his campaign.

Respectfully submitted,

Marc E. Elias

Democrats: Huckabee illegally took $1,500 in corporate donations

BY RACHEL O'NEAL Democrat-Gazette Capitol Bureau

Republican Lt. Gov. Mike Huckabee of Texarkana is the subject of a complaint filed Friday with the Federal Election Commission.

The Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee at Washington lodged the complaint, alleging that Huckabee accepted $1,500 in illegal corporate contributions. Corporate contributions are prohibited in all federal races.

Muckabee is expected to be the GOP nominee in the race to succeed Sen. David D-Ark Pryor, Pryor announced last April that he would not seek a fourth term. Arkansas voters have never elected a Republican to the Senate

Bruce Lott, a spokesman for Huckabee's campaign, said the campaign contribution report contained errors. He said an amended report will be filed with the FEC.

Democrats charge that Huckabee accepted money from two corporations that do not have political action committees. The companies and the amounts of their doffations are Fort Smith Coca-Cola Bottling Co., $500; and Delta Beverage Group Inc. of Memphis, $1000.

Congressional candidates may accept campaign contributions of up to $1,000 per election from individuals, political action committees and political party committees.

"If Mike Huckabee is having so much trouble raising money for his Senate race that he has to take illegal contributions, then maybe he shouldn't be running," said Don Foley, executive director of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

Lott said the $500 contribution actually was an individual contribution from Roger Meek Jr., a managing partner of the Fort Smith company.

He said the Delta Beverage Group contribution was intended to help retire Huckabee's debt from his 1994 race for lieutenant governor. The money will be returned to the Memphis company, Lott said.

Democrats in the race are Attorney General Winston Bryant, Jonesboro lawyer Bill Bristow, state Sen. Lu Hardin of Russellville, Little Rock lawyer Sandy McMath, state Sen. Kevin Smith of Stuttgart and Mark Brown of Cabot.

Huckabee and Bryant already have reported contributions for the Nov. 5 general election even though they have yet to win their party nominations. An FEC spokesman said Friday that candidates are allowed to accept money for a general election campaign before winning the primary. If the candidate does not win his party's nomination, the general election contributions must be returned.

None of the other Senate candidates reported contributions for the general election.

According to FEC reports filed Jan. 31, Bryant received money for his general election campaign from two contributors — Graham Catlett, $500, and Meredith Catlett, $500. Both are Little Rock lawyers. They also gave Bryant $1,000 each for his primary campaign.

Huckabee's general election campaign contributions were from Linda Weaver of Maumelle, $1,000; Virginia Bailey of Little Rock, $500; and Colin McMillan of Roswell, N.M., $1,000. Each of the three contributors gave $1,000 for Huckabee's primary campaign. Bryant reported total contributions of $422,518, and Huckabee reported total contributions of $249,903.

Charles Miller, Bryant's campaign manager, said the attorney general is not actively soliciting contributions for a fall campaign. I tem #2

Dear Mr. Gibson:

We received your letter dated today December 23 indicating our failure to respond to a December 1 request for information. We have not received anything dated December 1, and was rather shocked to learn that you had an information request to us. We frankly have no idea whatsoever as to why we didn't receive your December 1 letter, but assure you we did not. As our previous record will indicate, it has not been our practice to be late or fail to disclose information as requested. We regret the problem.

Due to the fact that we received your letter on December 31, we will send a response as soon after the holiday as possible. It appears from first glance that contributions from Mrs. Dean Kerns were listed under his instead of her name.

Huckabee gets a bipartisan scolding

Ethics panel finds "inaccurate" records, "unreasonable" expenses.

BY MAX BRASTLEY

The bostom time is this is presty lousy bookkeeping."

The speaker was Candi Russell of Fort Smith, a member of the stare Ethics Coumission, as it reviewed smill findings on Lt. Gov. Mike Huckaboe's fond-raising in the months after his November 1994 re-election.

Russell's comment was significant. A one-time Huckabee campaign worker, she joined in two 5-0 commission votes that effectively sent the message that Huckabee had not complied with campaign finance laws, Johning in the vote was Rita Looney, a Little Rock lawyer and Huckabee appointed to the commission, a circumstance that deprived Huckabee of the argument that he was a victim of Democratic partisants.

Because no formal investigation had been undertaken, commission rales precluded a vote on a formal finding of a law violation. But the commission issued two advisory opinions: 1) that Huclabous's finance reports were "incorrect"—full of errors and suissatements; and 2) that he had raised an unreasonable amount. $91,000, to pay a campaign debt that proved to be only about $17,000. Such an effort was hardly necessary. The review showed Huckabes apent only about $1,000 on two fund-raises, one by the campaign and one by the soft drink industry, that raised far more than necessary to retire the debt, about $40,000

The law says candidates who end campaigns with debt fear raise money "solely" to retire the debt. A commission opinion allows candidates to spend "reasonable" amounts toward administrative opers of debt redirement.

The commission's declsion that Huckshee stepped over the line was a political aethack for a fiscal conservative who expects to be the Republican nominee for U.S. Senate this way.

The outcome was also emberrassing on account of Hackabee's earlier pronouncement. In a campaign letter, he had bitterly criticized "junkyard journalists" who raised questions about his campaign reports. That letter said that his campaign finance disclosures were more extensive than any candidate's. He and his said had repeasedly told reporters that he had receipts to support all his expenses (they didn's). He also had told the Ethics Commission that he "firmly believed" all funds had been rained, spens and reported legally. The Ethics Commission firmly disagreed, Hocksbre, who had saked the commission to look into his meards as a way to combas negative undia sucation, wasa's wholly cooperative in the lavestigation. The Ethics Commission was snable to phosecupy his records. Staff members were able to take only hand-written notes, a process that effectively stymied prolonged study.

A nine-how review of the records by commission staff turned up embarrassment enough.

Hockaher charged his campaign $1,500 in 1995 for a mip to Hawaii in 1994. He says the hip, to make a speech in support of mother Republican candidate, was supported to be eximburated, but he never got the money, he produced nothing in the way of money for debt retirement, in any case.

He charged in 1995, as a 1994 campaign expense, $2,000 for an August crip by him and campaign side Brenda Turner to Washington. The trip, undertaken in pure so explore his Senate prospects and in pure to talk to political consultant Dick Morris, also produced ne direct 1994 campaign contributions, other than forgiveness of a debt to Morris, which secraingly sould have been obtained by telephone.

The Ethics Commission also found that Hunkaber used money outcassibly raised to pay off 1994 debt to make trips wousd Arkansas in early 1995, during the time the Arkansas legislature was in assion. This is a time when empaige fund-raising is prohibited by taw. Huckaber said he needed to make such appearances, often as Republican Party disnerm, to leep up good public relations with people who might give him money later.

Also during the legicitative seccion. Huckabee kept Brenda Turner employed full-time to run a political office in Texarkana, uttimately paying her more than $10,000 for the work. She told investigators that no more than $0 percent of her time could be said to be directly related to retiring compaign debt, the rest was spent on political work such as scheduling Huckabor speaking appearances.

The investigation also found that a reported $4,166 rehmbursement of 'considuate' expresses in 1995 scatally was a cush payment to reconstruct his wife. James, for sollest driven during the 1994, at a rate of 30 onto a stille.

"I'd drive around all day for 30 cents a saile. I'll start right now," said Commissioner Troy Burris. Commissioners Eugene Hunt and Norton Wilson also pristized the true ("ridiculous" and "narrasonable" were Wilson's words).

It marks the third time the Hackabee family has drawn cash from campaign funds, a legal though politically problematic practice. In his 1992 campaign for Senare, he paid himself, through a personal communications company, for campaign work. In his 1993 race for liamenant governor, he guid his wife a salary.

Huckaber's attorney, Frank Arey of Conway, had hoped to make the case that Huckaber had operated no differently than See page 9

REPORTER

ETHICS: Command from page 8 and conditions real investigation found atterwise. Only Gov. Jim Coy Tuckus among state-wide official carries a continuing compaign debt of say size, and he has spent a relatively small amount on portage and temporary workers.

To a degree. Huchapter was a victim of the activities foreign of the Ethics Commission. There have undoubtedly been aloppy campaign record-leeppers before him. But the Commission now has a full-time staff amorney and investigator. Huchapter is the firm unjoe condidate to draw in-depth armination.

Histories has argued that the law doesn't provide specific gwidasor for what constituest a masonable amount to spend in admininguive come to neith debt.

Commissioner Troy Burtls said that spending more than about 20 percent of campaign contributions on administrative costs was exocusive. Huckabee spent more than 30 percent.

The commission decided, for the time being, to follow a common-sense approach. They know unreasonable apending when they see it.

Tricky Dick

A sidelight of the Mike Huckshoe eampsign's day before the state Ethics Commission last week was a tidbit about Dick Morels, the Connecticut political consultant. Morels has been described as something of a political soul mane of Hucksbee, a Republican, but it working now as a consultant to a Democrat, President Clinton Marris worked for Huckaber in the 1994 empaign and, it developed, he lorgave a debt of more than $15,000 to Muckabee in August 1995, which was one of the west Nuckabee eventually balanced his campaign books.

The Ethics Commission staff said they and been told Motris forgave the debt for "political" reasons. Frank Arry, Hackabbe's attorney, explained that Morris had said "he could make more maney working for President Clinical" and didn't want to have to separt receiving money from a Republican sandidate in 1995.

The financial contribution limit in Athanas is $1,000 per election, but Arey said in-kind contributions in excess of that limit were legal under a provision of the law allowing voluntary contributions of personal services.

Political expense account
The Ethics Commission investigasion of Lt. Gov. Mike Huckabee, in concert with office records obtained under the state Freedom of Informanon Act, shows he used campaign money for prohibited purposes.

For example, a summary of the Ethics Commission fladings showed that Huckabee claimed $1.573 in travelex-peace in Jane and July of 1995. Under state law, money raised post-election was supposed to be used "solaly" to extire debt from the 1994 campaign.

But Huckaboe's office calendas, obtained by the Times under the FOI, shows $404 of the usvel money paid to fly Huckaboe to the Pink Tomato Featival in Warren.

Subsequent charges to the campaign for July 4-13 covered Hucksbey's travels to the Piggort July 4th picase, the Pangburn July 4th parade and an apparance at Arkansas Governor's School in Commy, among other typisal public appearancet.

Huckabas contends that because these appearances were political—"maintaining constituent contact" was how he described it to the Ethics Commission—they should be reimbureable avea if they were only vaguely substed to exception tend-raising. The Ethics Commission indicated it wasn't inclined to open the door to such practices.

Huckabee's '95 fund raising wasn't reasonable, panel says

BY ELIZABETH CALDWELL

Lt. Gov. Mike Huckabee's 1995 fund-raising activities were not "reasonable" based on the size of his 1994 campaign debt, the Arkansas Ethics Commission concluded Thursday.

The commission determined that Huckabee raised $91,825 to pay off a debt of only $16,996. But commissioners stopped short of ruling that Huckabee violated state campaign finance laws.

"You have never declared this to be an official investigation," Randy Wright, the Ethics Commistion attorncy, told the five commissioners.

Huckabee's campaign account was used to pay off credit-card debts and fund a trip to Hawaii.

"The Huckabee campaign did not focus on paying the debt that was listed," said Eugene Hunt of Pine Bluff, an Ethics Commission apparatus in place.

Arey said the Huckabee campaign "sought the advice and counsel of the commission throughout the election" and "went to great lengths to follow their counsel as well as the letter and spirit of the rules. We are surprised and disappointed by this new interpretation."

Huckabee could not be reached for comment.

Huckabec won a special election for lieutenant governor in July 1993 to become the first Republican elected to statewide office in Arkansas since November 1990 when Frank White upset then-Gov. :iti Clinton.

Hucksbee was elected in November 1994 to a full four-year term. He defeated then-state Sen. Charlie Cole Chaffin, D-Benton.

The lieutenant governor, a Southern Baptist minister and professional speaker from Texarkana, is expected to be the Republican nominee this year for the seal being given up by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark

State law prohibits candidates from raising funds during a legislative session, 30 days before a regular session and 30 days after a regular session. The 1995 ragular session began Jan. 9 and ended April 7

The law also prohibits a candidate from raising money more than two years before an election except to ratire a debt.

A three-month review of fluck-aboe's campaign records: began when the lieutenant governor asked the Ethics Commission to examine his reports and those of other elected officials. Questions about Huckabee's fund-raising activities had been raised by the media

A 1991 Ethics Commission opinion said campaign Anals can be used for the "reasonable expense of raising and administering the past debt fund." Hucksbee has insisted that he raised, spent and reported all funds legally.

"It is as though there were additional debts created to justify additional fund raising." Hunt said. The commission also completed

The commission also completed its review of campaign finance reports filed by Democratic Secretary of State Sharon Priest.

"Unlike we had originally believed, Sharon Priest did not end her campaign in aurplus but in debt," a stall report said.

Priest now has a surplus of $3,886 and has asked the commission for advice on how the monsy can be used. The commission decided to study the faxue.

In the Huckabce case, commission members roted unanimously to izue an advisory opinion notifying the lieutenant governor what he did wrong. The opinion's wording will be dis cussed and voted on at the commisston's next meeting.

The commission found that amended reports that Huckaber submitted after the inquiry began were inaccurate, including reported payments on credit cards that had been voided.

"I agree we made some pretty bad bookkeeping mistakes." Are; told commission members.

Buckabec's original report listed a campaign debt of $35,560 from 1994. Ethics Commission, stall members determined that Huckabec owed $27,795 at the end of 1994 in addition to $7,300 in reimburse meats due to Huckabee and his wife, Janet, for a loan, utility bills and travel expenses.

Some debts were later forgiven bringing the total debt to $16,996 The largest outstanding debt was a $15,000 fee to political consultant Dick Marris of Connecticut.

Arey said Morris kept putting of acceptance of the payment until he forgave the debt Aug. 1. Morris, who is now advising President Clinton, didn't want to accept additional payments from Republican ellents. Arey said.

The Ethics Commission investigation found that Huckabee had raised enough hinds by May 1895 to pay off the debt but instead used part of the money for travel to political functions. The payments included one for a May 1894 trip to Hawaii, Huckabee was not reimbursed by the compaign for the trip until the following year.

The 1994 campaign account also was used to pay for trips taken by Huckabee in June, July and August 1005.

Amanda Nixon White, director of the Ethics Commission, said Huckabee told her that Republican officials in Washington had promised to pay the $1,500 for his Hawailan trip to support a GOP candidate in the state but never sent the money.

Ruckabee listed large payments to Visa, MasterCard and Discover for travel expenses. Commission staff members were told that Huckabee paid the expenses himself and asked the campaign to reimburse him by writing checks directly to credit-card companies. Credit-card expenses often were not itemized.

ANÁLYSIS OF HUCKABEE'S POST ELECTION 94 ELECTION REPORTS

RETIREMENT OF DEBT: (see attached Summary of Contributions and Expenditures)

The November 1994 report reflects a $20,554.30 debt to be retired. In December of 1994, however, a math error occurred which resulted in approximately overstating the outstanding debt by $24,000. The actual debt should have been $11,739.01 rather than the reported $35,560.30. It would seem that it would be obvious to a campaign to recognize whether it had outstanding obligations of $11,000 or $35,000.

Had the math error not occurred, and based upon actual calculations, the campaign should have retired its debt at the end of May, 1995 with a surplus of $8,805.65. However, due to the miscalculation of debt, an additional $72,284.22 was raised with expenditures of $57,268.85 subsequent to the month of May, 1995. If the debt was overstated by nearly $24,000, then a real question arises as to where that $24,000 actually went.

According to Huckabee's own records, he raised $159,322.27 to retire a post-campaign debt of $11,739.01.

CONTRIBUTION VIOLATIONS: (see attached Summary of Contributors)

Several violations appear here, some may be errors in reports, some appear to be excess contributions, and some appear to be prohibited contributions. Below is a list of questionable contributions:

Arkansas Pharmacists PAC was reported as contributing $250.00 in December 1994 and an additional $1,000.00 in June of 1995. The total aggregate contribution was reported as $1,000.00 when in actuality $1,250.00 was received—$250.00 over the contribution limit.

Ronald P. Bridges was reported as contributing $100.00 in October, 1994 with an aggregate of $200.00. Then another contribution of $800.00 is reported for October, 1994 with a stated aggregate of $1,000. Later, in December of 1994, yet another contribution of $100.00 is reported for a stated aggregate of $100.00. The reports misstates the aggregate in December, 1994 and indicate receiving $100.00 in excess of contribution limits.

Charles Cabe is reported as contributing $100.00 in November of 1994 for an aggregate of $100.00. In May of 1995, Cabe is reported as contributing another $250.00 for a total aggregate of $928.00. If these reports are accurate, contributions were received between November, 1994 and May, 1995 and not reported in any of the interim months.

Dealers Interested in Government is reported as contributing $500.00 in November, 1994, $750.00 in December, 1994, and another $250.00 in June, 1995. This final aggregate total reported is $750.00. The reports indicate that $500.00 was received in excess of contribution limits.

First Pac-State & Local Fun- was reported as contributing $500.00 in October, 1994 for an aggregate of $1,000.00. Then in June, 1995, First Pac made another contribution of $250.00 for a stated aggregate of $1,000.00. This appears to reflect a contribution of $250.00 in excess of contribution limits.

Robert E. Miller was reported as contributing $500.00 in October, 1994 for an aggregate of $500.00. In December, 1994, an additional $100.00 was reported received for an aggregate of $600.00. In May, 1995, another $100.00 was received and an aggregate of $1,000.00. This would appear to reflect that contributions were received between December, 1994 and May, 1994 which were not reflected on interim reports.

Larry Romine was reported as contributing $500.00 in December of 1994 for an aggregate of $1,000.00. Then in May, 1995, an additional $100.00 was reported received for a stated aggregate of $100.00. It appears that there might be an excess contribution of $100.00 over limits.

Harrow Smith was reported as contributing $100.00 in December, 1994 for a total of $200.00. Then in May, 1995, another $100.00 was reported as received for a stated total of $400.00. This appears to reflect that $100.00 might have been received in the interim but not reported on interim reports.

There are numerous other misstatements as to aggregate totals that were not disclosed above. Also, no review was taken of contributions received prior to October, 1994. It does appear that recordkeeping might be lacking or that reports were filled out in error.

UNREGISTERED PAC CONTRIBUTIONS: (see attached Summary of PAC activity)

Arkansas law prohibits a candidate from accepting contributions from a PAC unless the PAC has previously registered with the Secretary of State. From the reports, it appears that the following PAC contributions may be questionable:

AIADA PAC: Contributed in December, 1994 with no record of registration.

ANOPAC. Contributed in October, 1994 and registered in January, 1995.

Ark Dental Pol't Action: Contributed in Dec. 1994, and registered in Jan. 1995.

Ark. Hosp. Assoc. PAC: Contributed in Dec. 1994 with no record of registration.

Ark. Mfg. Housing Assoc: Contributed in June 1994 with no record of registration.

Ark. Pharmacist PAC: Contributed in Dec. 1994, and registered in Jan. 1995.

Ark. Soft Drink Assoc.: Contributed in Oct. 1994 with no registration.

Arkansas VEPAC Contributed in Oct. and Dec. 1994 with no registration.

Dealers Interested in Gov't: Contributed in Nov. and Dec, 1994 and again in June, 1995 with registration occurring in Sept. 1995.

F&M Bank PAC: Contributed in Nov. 1994 and registered in June, 1995.

First PAC-State & Local: Contributed in Oct. 1994 and June, 1995 with no registration.

Life Underwater PAC: Contributed in Oct. 1994 with no registration.

National Soft Drink Assoc: Contributed in July 1995 with no registration.

SWB Ark. Em PAC: Contributed in Dec. 1994 with registration in January 1995.

VOTE: Contributed in December 1994 with registration in January 1995.

W.J. "BILL" MCCUENT
SECRETARY OF STATE

Dear Sirs:

It has come to my attention that we may have errors on recent campaign reports.

We use a campaign software program that keeps and prints a line item called "year to date total" for each contributor. This totals contributions from both the primary and general periods of an election. It has been pointed out to me that the correct line item on the Campaign Contribution Report pages required by your office reads "aggregate this election." The language and description differences between our software and the required forms means that some of our contributor aggregates have been typed incorrectly.

We will be doing amended reports for those pages in error on the aggregates. None of our contributors have given over the limit in any period; however, by listing a year to date total, we have lumped primary and general periods together, and without correction and interpretation, it would appear contributors are over the limit.

We will send the amended pages as soon as possible and make sure we type the proper aggregates on our next report.

Thank you,

Brenda Tumer

Campaign Director

Dear Ms. Priest,

Please find enclosed an amended "Report Of Contributions and Expenditures" for the period covering July 1 through July 31, 1995, and dated August 25, 1995. This report will replace the one filed for August 15th.

Due to a banking error that I have discovered, we are amending our current surplus figure and the amount of our expenditures. The notation of "Final Monthly Report" should be ignored; we will be filing the final report at a future date.

Sincerely,

Brenda Turner

Gov. Jim Guy Tucker is clearly at ground zero in the latest blast of Whitewater indictments, but the fallout is creating a colossal dilemma for Republican Lt. Gov. Mike < Huckabee. >

Not that any of us should lose sleep over < Huckabee's > "problems." All he has to do is play his cards - he doesn't even have to play them right - and he likely will be Arkansas's next U.S. senator or its next governor. < Huckabee's > problem is he has to decide which one he wants.

As his bad luck would have it, < Huckabee > organized a Senate exploratory committee on the very day the Whitewater grand jury handed down a 21-count indictment, 19 counts naming Tucker.

<Huckabee> claims that is just pro forma and he is months away from making a decision about the Senate race. But his campaign finance records belie that. Senate rules require candidates to file a financial disclosure report after receiving or spending more than $ 5,000. <Huckabee> hasn't filed one yet he said last week he has yet to reach the threshold.

But his state campaign finance records show the $29,811-a-year lieutenant governor is collecting and spending from $20,000 to $30,000 a month campaigning for something.

The latest indictment tying Tucker to Whitewater linchpins Jim and Susan McDougal increases the chances that the lieutenant governor may be called on to perform the one duty assigned to the office - become governor if a vacancy is created.

It creates an interesting conundrum for the Baptist minister-turned-politician: Does < Huckabee > have a moral obligation to set aside his Senate ambitions and be at the ready in his state's time of gubernatorial crisis, or does he give in to good old political opportunism and risk losing that nonpolitician cloak of respectability that launched his political career in the first place?

After the first set of indictments, other Republicans who might want to run for the Senate if < Huckabee > doesn't became increasingly vocal that the lieutenant governor needed to make up his mind.

If < Huckabee > can walk into the governor's office by January, as GOP operatives are predicting, then they say he needs to take himself out of the Senate race as early as possible.

If he doesn't, the party fears no other Republican will have the necessary time to put together the money and organization to make a credible Senate race.

That lack of a well-established backup candidate for the Senate may be the exact reason < Huckabee > won't decide.

The conventional wisdom is that if < Huckabee > runs for Senate he wins; if he doesn't, the Democrats take it.

The seat in question is one of six the national Republicans have targeted in their quest to raise their Senate majority to a veto-proof 60. They don't really care who is governor of Arkansas, but the state's Senate seat is of critical importance to the party and its "Contract With America."

Meanwhile, a look at < Huckabee's > monthly campaign finance reports gives a glimpse of just how different life might be if legal troubles force Tucker from office.

Last year Tucker dedicated his campaign for a full term to defending his administration's soft-drink tax. He won with 60 percent of the vote. The tax was ratified by 58 percent of the voters. The two-cents-per-can tax is dedicated to the pot of money the state uses to match federal Medicaid funds and fund health care for the elderly poor and the indigent.

The soda-pop industry, which has feared from the outset the Arkansas tax would pique the interest of other state legislatures, apparently is courting <Huckabee. > As governor, he would have substantial clout in a move to repeal the tax.

On last month's campaign finance report, < Huckabee > received more than $ 13,000 from Coca-Cola, Pepsi and Dr. Pepper manufacturers, bottlers in three states, vending machine manufacturers, can makers and syrup manufacturers.

Huckabee's '95 fund raising wasn't reasonable, panel says

BY ELIZABETH CALDWELL Democrati Gazene Capeol Burkey

Lt Cov. Mike Huckabee's 1995 fund-raising activities were not "reasonable" based on the size of his 1994 campaign debt, the Arkansus Ethics Commission concluded Thursday.

The commission determined that Huckabee raised $91,825 to pay off a debt of only $16,996. But commissioners stopped short of ruling that Huckahee violated state campaign finance laws.

"You have never declared this to be an official investigation." Randy Wright, the Ethics Commission attorney, told the five commissioners.

Huckabee's campaign account was used to pay off credit-card debts and fund a trip to Hawali.

"The Huckabee campaign did not focus on paying the debt that was listed," said Eugene Hunt of Pine Bluff, an Ethics Commission member.

Frank Arey of Conway, Huckubee's attorney, told the commis-See HUCKABEE, Page 13A

Arey said the Hucksbee Campaign sought the advice and counsel of the commission throughout the election and went to great longths to follow their counsel as well as the letter and spirit of the rules. We are surprised and disappointed by this new interpretation."

Huckabee could not be reached for comment.

Euclabee won a special election for lisotenant governor in July 1983 to become the first Republican elected to statewide office in Arkansas since November 1980 when Frank White upset then-Gov. 301 Clinton Huckabee was elected in November 1894 to a full four-year term He defeated then-state Sen. Charlie Cole Chaffin, D-Benton.

The lieutenant governor, a Southern Baptist minister and professional speaker from Texarkana, is expected to be the Republican nominee this year for the soul being given up by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

State law prohibits candidates from raising funds during a legislative session, 30 days before a regutar session and 30 days after a regular session. The 1985 regular session began Jan. 8 and ended April 7.

The law also prohibits a candidate from raising money more than two years before an election except to retire a debt.

A three-month review of fluckabee's campaign records began when the lieutenant governor asked the Ethics Commission to examine his reports and those of other elected officials. Questions about Huckabee's fund-raising activities had been raised by the mo-

A 1991 Ethics Commission opinion said campaign funds can be used for the "reasonable expense of relaing and administering the past debt fund." Huckabee has insisted that he reised, spent and reported all funds legally.

"It is as though there were additional debts created to justify additional fund raising." Hunt said.

The commission also completed fit review of campaign finance reports filed by Democratic Secretary of State Sharpo Priest.

"Unlike we had originally believed, Sharon Priest did not end her campaign in surplus but in debt," a stall report said.

Priest now has a surplus of $3.586 and has asked the commission for advice on how the money can be used. The commission decided to study the issue.

ry opinion settlying the Hestenam sy opinion settlying the Hestenam governor what he did wrong. The opinion's wording will be dis cussed and voted on at the commission's next meeting.

The commission found that amended reports that Euclaber submitted after the inquiry begat were insecurate, including report ed payments on credit cards that had been worded.

"I agree we made some pretty had bookkeeping mistakes," Are; told commission members.

Buckabee's original report listed a campaign debt of $35,560 from 1994. Ethics Commission staff members determined that Huckabee awad $27,795 at the end of 1994 in addition to $7,300 in reimbursements due to Huckabee and his wife, Janat, for a loan, whirty billy and travel expenses.

Some debts were later forgiven bringing the total debt to $16,996 The largest outstanding debt was a $15,000 fee to political consultant Dick Morris of Coanecticus.

Arry said Morris kept pusting of seceptance of the payment uptil he forgave the debt Aug. 1. Morris, who is now advising President Clinton, didn't want to accept additional payments from Republican clients, Arry said.

The Ethics Commission investigation found that Huckabee had raised anough funds by May 1885 to pay off the debt but instead used part of the money for travel to political functions. The payments included one for a May 1994 trip to Hawaii. Huckabee was not reimbursed by the compaign for the trip until the following year.

The 1994 campaign account also was used to pay for trips taken by Euckahee in June, July and August 1905.

Amanda Nixon White, director of the Thics Commission, said Huckahee told her that Republican efficials in Washington had promised to pay the $1,500 for his Hawaiian trip to support a GOP etandidate in the state but never sent the money.

Hucksber listed large payments to Viss, MasterCard and Discover for travel expenses. Commission staff members were told that Hucksbee paid the expenses himself and asked the compaign to reimburse him by writing checks threatly to credit-card companies. Credit-card expenses often were not itemized.

Lt. Gov. Mike < Huckabee > opened his campaign Wednesday for the U.S. Senate and declined to say whether he supported the Republican agenda on farm policy changes critical to Delta cotton and rice farmers.

<Huckabee, > who has been courting black leaders in the Delta, also declined to outline his positions on Republican-backed budget policies or identify areas where he disagreed with the national party.

"We've been focused on the election and I wouldn't want to get into this vote, that vote, but I would want everyone in Arkansas to understand.

The primary reason that I want to run for the U.S. Senate is not to give the Republicans another voice in the Senate but to give the people of Arkansas a voice in the Senate." < Huckabee > said.

<Huckabee, > who has been introduced to major Republican campaign contributors by Republican Senate Campaign Committee Chairman Alfonse D'Amato of New York, said much of what the Republicans seek to do in Washington 'is exactly what the people of Arkansas want.'

<Huckabee> is running for the seat to be vacated by the retiring David Pryor, a Democrat.

As for the farm bill, < Huckabee > said some government subsidies were 'ridiculous' but 'two things any country has to able to do is, No. 1, it had better be able to feed itself and No. 2, it had better be able to manufacture for itself its own weapons of defense.'

The 40-year-old Baptist preacher opened his third campaign in four years with airport pep rallies in seven cities - West Memphis, Jonesboro, El Dorado, Springdale, Fort Smith, Texarkana and Little Rock.

< Huckabee > expects no opposition for the Republican nomination.

Five Democrats have announced or expressed an intent to run: Jonesboro lawyer Bill Bristow, Russellville state Sen. Lu Hardin, Little Rock lawyer

Sandy McMath and Cabot resident Mark Brown have announced their candidacies.

Atty. Gen. Winston Bryant is expected to announce early next year. State Sen. Kevin Smith (D-Stuttgart) is expected to decide in December whether he will run.

< Huckabee's > announcement came two weeks after questions were raised about his campaign finances.

The <state Ethics Commission> is scheduled to review his 1994 campaign books on Nov. 2.

State law prohibits candidates from raising money more than two years before the next election except to retire a debt. < Huckabee, > who ended the 1994 campaign with a $ 20,000 to $ 35,000 debt, has raised $ 138,000 since the election.

He said Wednesday he was willing to give the Ethics Commission underlying documents showing how the $ 138,000 was spent, but he refused to release the documents publicly for the media to "nit-pick" over.

<Huckabee> said he expected a ''tough, hard and intense'' campaign and he asked his supporters to trust him.

"I'm sure you'll read and hear things that you'll say, 'I can't believe it.' Well, then don't."

<Huckabee, > whose political successes have been fueled by strong support from the Christian right, said traditional Democratic voters - including black voters - were responding to his message.

"They finally realize that the policies of liberalism for the past generation have done little to do anything more than impoverish future generations," < Huckabee > said.

Earlier in his speech, < Huckabee > said it was important for Arkansas to send to Washington a senator who can be a part of the majority party and who holds values and viewpoints held in common in Arkansas.

"Most of us understand that people who get up at six in the morning, fix a sandwich, work all day, come home after dark tired are tired of coming home knowing that half their paycheck will go to those who get up at 10, watch Oprah all afternoon and cruise town all night," < Huckabee > said to whoops, whistles and applause from the crowd of 100 supporters.

He said law-abiding citizens are no longer tolerant of having to shield their children behind burglar bars and electronic security, "while criminals get weekend passes and enjoy cable TV."

HEADLINE: HUCKABEE GETS SIGNS HE'D BE A HIT IF HE RAN BYLINE: JANE FULLERTON, Democrat-Gazette Washington Bureau

BODY:

WASHINGTON -- Showing signs of a < Senate > run, Lt. Gov. < Mike Huckabee > spent the past week in the nation's capital laying groundwork for 1996.

Huckabee met with key Republicans, including <Senate > Majority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas and House Speaker Newt Gingrich of Georgia, during his three-day visit to Washington.

The response, Huckabee said, was overwhelmingly positive.

"It's been incredible," he said. "If I'd had this kind of reaction in '92, I'd already be here."

Huckabee lost the 1992 < Senate > race to Democratic Sen. Dale Bumpers by a 60-40 margin. He is considered the favorite for the 1996 GOP nomination to fill the seat of retiring Democratic Sen. David Pryor.

On the Democratic side, state Sen. Lu Hardin of Russellville has formally announced his candidacy, and Attorney General Winston Bryant has formed an exploratory committee.

Although Huckabee has yet to formally announce his plans, the former Baptist minister from Texarkana is ready to begin assembling his campaign apparatus. He plans to form an exploratory committee "in the next couple of weeks" so he can begin raising money.

"Short of an announcement, when you set up a committee and open an account, you're certainly testing the waters," he acknowledged.

The race to fill Arkansas' open < Senate > seat is expected to draw national attention, with Republicans mounting an aggressive campaign in President Clinton's home state.

Already, the National Republican Senatorial Committee has promised the maximum financial support -- $ 212,000 -- to help a Republican win an Arkansas <Senate> seat for the first time since Reconstruction. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., is chairman of the senatorial committee, and also chairman of the <Senate> Special Whitewater Committee.

Huckabee said he will make a decision about whether to seek the < Senate > post "in the fall."

"I don't want to be boxed into a specific date," he said.

In deciding whether to run, Huckabee is weighing several factors. Chief among them is the fact that he stands to become the state's chief executive if Gov. Jim Guy Tucker should be forced to step down because of the Whitewater investigation.

Huckabee said he is receiving strong encouragement to run for the < Senate > from supporters at home as well as those in Washington.

"Many people who supported Clinton and have supported Democrats have come to me and said they'd support me," he said, declining to give any names.

Despite the state's longtime Democratic leanings, Huckabee contended that voters realize the importance of having a senator in the majority party. The GOP now holds a 54-46 edge in the < Senate > and could gain a filibuster-proof majority of 60 in next year's election.

"A freshman Democratic senator after the '96 election could be rendered virtually powerless," he said. "Electing a Republican becomes certainly important from a standpoint of Arkansas protecting itself."

Huckabee estimates that he would need to raise at least $ 2 million for the 1996 < Senate > race. While that may seem expensive, it is substantially less than the cost of < Senate > races in larger states.

"One of the things that will determine whether I run is to make sure the financing is there," Huckabee said. "I know the hard way what it's like to be outspent, and I don't want to do that again."

In the 1992 race, Bumpers spent more than $ 2 million --more than twice the $ 910,000 spent by Huckabee.

During last week's trip to Washington, Huckabee also wrapped up some loose ends from his 1994 lieutenant governor's race, paying some thank-you visits to supporters.

The trip was paid for out of his lieutenant governor's campaign funds, Huckabee said. He was accompanied by a campaign aide, Brenda Turner.

Huckabee, who arrived in Washington on Tuesday and left Thursday, spent much of his time meeting with GOP lawmakers on Capitol Hill. He even ran into Pryor while riding the < Senate > subway.

Wednesday, Huckabee met with Dole, the leading candidate for the 1996 GOP presidential nomination. Huckabee has signed on as one of 12 national co-chairmen for Dole's campaign.

Huckabee also met several of the <Senate's> more conservative Republican members, including Sen. Don Nickles of Oklahoma, Sen. Trent Lott of Mississippi, Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah and Sen. John Ashcroft of Missouri.

And Huckabee made the rounds of some of Washington's most influential political reporters. He met with David Broder, a columnist with The Washington Post, and Fred Barnes, the former editor of The New Republic who is working with a new conservative publication, The Standard.

Huckabee also found time to meet with Republican political consultant Dick Morris, who has generated attention recently for his work with Clinton. Morris has regularly worked with Clinton since his first race for governor in 1978.

Although Huckabee has received some pressure to drop Morris because of Morris' high-profile work for the president, he plans to continue seeking the Connecticut consultant's advice.

"It's an awkward situation that we'll work our way through," Huckabee explained. If Huckabee decides to run, Morris will be "one of several consultants."

HEADLINE: Clinton Adviser May Aid GOP Arkansan

BYLINE: Paul Taylor; David S. Broder

BODY:

When Arkansas Lt. Gov. <Mike Huckabee> (R) came to town last week to discuss his planned race for the <Senate> vacancy created by the retirement next year of Sen. David Pryor (D), he brought some surprising news. One of the consultants he has lined up is Dick Morris, the same fellow who has cut such a wide swath since President Clinton turned to him for advice after the 1994 election.

Morris, who consulted for Clinton in Arkansas races, helped Huckabee win the 1993 special election for lieutenant governor and guided his reelection campaign last year. As Huckabee tells the story, Morris called him in 1993, when word of his candidacy circulated, and said, "I've invested 15 years in Arkansas politics," counseling Clinton on his races for governor, "and now I've lost my horse. I'm looking for another horse."

Morris, one of the few consultants with clients in both parties, is "very good, one on one, in helping you refine the message," Huckabee said, "but he's very dangerous for a person who doesn't have strong principles. He's a salesman, and you have to be sure you can tell him what you want sold."

Huckabee said that Morris has agreed to be "one of my consultants" in 1996 -- a position that would put Morris in the odd situation of helping elect a Republican in Arkansas at the same time he is trying to reelect Clinton as president.

Morris, in a phone interview, confirmed Huckabee's account of their past dealings but said. "We have not formalized any relationship at this point" for 1996.

With Gov. Jim Guy Tucker (D) under indictment and awaiting trial on Whitewater-related charges, it is possible that Huckabee may be elevated to the governorship before 1996 -- in which case, he says, he would not run for the < Senate. >

But as it stands, Morris may have two Arkansas clients -- one Republican and one Democratic -- who, coincidentally, claim the same home town.

As Huckabee says, "Dick has only two friends in the world -- and we're both from Hope."

HEADLINE: Huckabee warns GOP not to alienate Arkansas BYLINE: Ralph Z. Hallow; THE WASHINGTON TIMES

BODY:

Republicans can sweep to victory in President Clinton's home state and across the nation in 1996 if they speak to values instead of attacking Democrats, Arkansas Lt. Gov. < Mike Huckabee > said yesterday.

"A lot of people are writing off Arkansas, particularly at the presidential level. I don't think that's a smart bet," said Mr. Huckabee, who is preparing to run for an open <Senate> seat next year.

The key to GOP success in Arkansas is to avoid insulting its residents, even obliquely, said Mr. Huckabee in a meeting with editors and reporters at The Washington Times.

Mr. Huckabee, who has gained a reputation as a skilled politician, cautioned that if his party's nominee goes into Arkansas "and attacks Bill Clinton and just trashes him, that'll be terrible."

He warned that if the GOP presidential nominee next year "were to go do what George Bush did" in his failed 1992 presidential re-election bid, "trash Arkansas, and talk about dirty rivers and otherwise exaggerate about how bad things are in the state, it would be horrible."

Mr. Huckabee said that most Arkansans are conservative but still think of themselves as Democrats. The way for a GOP presidential nominee to carry the state is to be less of a partisan and to "simply come in and speak to the values of Arkansas and resonate with those values."

"The key is ignoring Bill Clinton and focusing on what you're for and not on who you're against."

The GOP presidential nominee should also apply that strategy nationwide, he said.

Mr. Huckabee, whose election victory in 1993 made him the the first Republican to win a statewide race in his state since 1980, believes the GOP can win all four House seats in Arkansas and the < Senate > seat that David Pryor is retiring from next year, as well as carry the state for the Republican presidential nominee.

Mr. Huckabee, a Baptist minister with a hearty sense of humor, won a

Mr. Tucker now faces trial on three felony charges that he lied to obtain a federally backed loan and plotted to evade taxes. He has accused Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr of railroading him for partisan reasons.

The dilemma Mr. Huckabee faces is that the outcome of the Tucker trial may be delayed until next year. If Mr. Tucker is found guilty and has to vacate the governorship, Mr. Huckabee automatically becomes governor. That could leave too little time for another Republican to raise enough money for an effective < Senate > race against the Democratic contestant.

If on the other hand Mr. Tucker is found not guilty, he is expected to campaign on behalf of Democrats by appealing to Arkansans' pride, arguing that Republicans let the Whitewater independent counsel besmirch Mr. Tucker's and the state's reputation purely for political gain.

Mr. Huckabee said his counterstrategy would be to argue that "the worst thing that could happen to Arkansas is to be completely shut out" of a Republican-dominated < Senate > at a time when Congress is reapportioning federal tax dollars and responsibilities to the states.

Mr. Huckabee agreed Republicans in Congress appear to be pulling back from their commitments to enact congressional term limits, pass a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget and roll back affirmative-action laws.

He predicted Republican lawmakers will recover their backbones later this month when GOP lawmakers get out of Washington for summer recess, return to their home districts and "hear from people in the real world."

Huckabee gets a bipartisan scolding

Ethics panel finds "inaccurate" records, "unreasonable" expenses.

BY MAX SEASTLEY

The bostom line is this is presty lousy bookkeeping."

The speaker was Candi Russell of Fort Smith, a teember of the state Ethics Commission, as it reviewed staff fundings on Ls. Gov. Mike Huckaboc's fund-raising in the months after his November 1994 m-elocsion.

Russell's comment was eignificant. A one-time Hockabee campaign worker, she joined in two 5-0 commission votes that effectively sent the message that Huckabee had not compiled with campaign finance laws. Joining in the vote was Rita Looney, a Little Rock lawyer and Huckabee appointed to the commission, a circumstance that deprived Huckabee of the argument that he was a victim of Democratic purisans.

Because no formal investigation had been undertaken, commission rules precluded a vote on a formal finding of a law violation. But the commission issued two advisory opinions: 1) that Huckabon's finance raports were "incorrect"—dult of errors and missuement; and 2) that he had raised an unreasonable amount. $91,000, to pay a campaign debt that proved to be only about $17,000, 5 sech an affort was hardly necessary. The review showed Huckabon spread and the campaign and one by the soft drink industry, that raised far more than necessary to resize the drink shout the fact, about $40,000.

The law ways candidates who end campaigus with debt may miss stoney "notely" to retire the debt. A commission opinion allows candidates to spend "reasonable" arround to ward administrative costs of debt

The commission's decision that Huckabee support over the line was a political sethack for a fueld conservative who expects to be the Republican nominee for U.S. Senate this

The outcome was also emburrassing on account of Huckabee's earlier pronouncements. In a campaign letter, he had bitterly criticized "junkyard journalists" who mised questions about his campaign reports. That tetter said that his campaign finance disclosures were more extensive than any candidate's. He and his staff had repeasedly told reporters that he had receipe to support all his expenses (they didn's). He also had not the Ethics Commission that he "firstly believed" all funds had been raised, spend and reported legally. The Ethics Commission family disagreed.

Heckabee, who had asked the constitution to look into his records as a way to combat angetive gordia amention, wata't wholly cooperative in the lavestigation. The Eskirt Commission was easile to photocopy his records. Staff commisses were able to take only hand-witness moses, a propest that effectively stymbal prolonged study.

A nine-hour seview of the records by commission staff numed up embarrassment

Hackabee charged his campaign $1,500 in 1995 for a min to Hawaii in 1994. He says the stip, to make a speech in support of another Republican candidate, was supposed on the reinbursed, but he erver got the money, it produced sorking in the way of anomy for dobt retirmment, in any case.

He charged in 1995, as a 1994 campaign expense, $2,000 for an August trip by him and campaign aide Branda Turner to Washington. The trip, undertaken in part to explore his Senate prospects and in part to talk to political connulum Dick Merris, sine produced no direct 1994 compaign onarributions, other than forgiveness of a debt so Morris, which normingly could have been obtained by telephone.

The Ethics Commission also found that Huckabur sand money enternably raised to pay off 1994 dicht to make trips eround Arkansas in early 1995, during the time the Arkansas legislature was in acrsion. This is a time when campaign fund-raising is prohibited by law. Huckabur said he needed to make such appearances, often at Republican Party dinners, so foepup good public relations with people who might give him money later.

Also during the legislative sersion. Huckabee kept literada Turnes amployed full-time to run a political office in Tenarkum. utdimately paying her more than $10,000 for the work. She told investigators that no more than 50 percent of her time could be said to be directly reloted to retiring campaign debt, the rest was spent on politied work such as scheduling Haritabor speaking appearances.

The investigation this found that a reported $4,166 retrobursement of 'mandistate' expenses in 1995 actually was a cach payment to missistene his wife. Asset, for soiles driven change the 1994, at a rate of 30 cssss a mile.

"I'd drive mound all day for 30 cous a soils. I'll start right now," said Commissioner Troy Burris. Commissioners Engone Hunt and Norton Wilson also criticized the rote ("tidiculous" and "sareasonable" were Wilson's words).

It marks the third time the Nuclabee family has drawn eath from companies funds, a legal though politically problematic practice. In his 1992 campaign for Senare, he paid himself, through a personal communications company, for compaign work. He his 1993 race for lieucenant governor, he paid his wife a salary.

Huckshee's attorney, Frank Arey of Conway, had hoped to make the case that Huckshee had operated no differently shan wher candidates. But the Commission rest! investigation found otherwise. Only Gov. I'm Guy Tucker among state-wide official carries a continuing campaign dete of any aire, and he has spent a relatively small amount on pottage and temporary workers.

To a degree, Huckaber was a victim of the newfound strength of the Ribits Commission. There have necloubusity been sloppy campaign recurd-herepers before him. But the Commission now has a full-time staff amoracy and investigator. Muchaber is the first major candidate to thruw in-depth examination.

Histinhan has argued that the law donts's provide apacific guidaner for what constiumes a masonable amount to spand in adminjunctive costs to retire debt.

Commissioner Troy Burn's said that spending more shan about 20 percent of campaign contributions on administrative costs was excessive. Huckaber spend more shan 80 percent.

The commission decided, for the time being, to follow a common-sense approach. They know www.xxxxxxable apending when they see it.

Tricky Dick

A addight of the Mike Huckehoc campaign's day before the state Ethics Commission last week was a tidbut about Dick Morels, the Connecticut political consultant. Mottis has been described as something of a political soul more of Huckehoe, a Republican, but is working sow as a consultant to a Democrat. President Clinton Morris worked for Nuckabec in the 1994 campaign and, is developed, he forgave a debt of more than $15,000 to Buckabec in August 1995, which was one of the ways Huckabec eventually balanced his campaign books.

The Ethics Commission staff said they had been told blottes (orgave the debt for "political" reasons. Frank Arey, Hackabee's attorney, expfained that Morris had said "he could make more money working for President Cliatoa" and didn't want to have to seport receiving money from a Republican sandidate in 1995.

The financial contribution firmit in Arkansas is $1,000 per election, but arry said in-kind contributions in excess of that limit were legal under a provision of the law allowing voluntary contributions of personal services.

Pollucal expense account
The Ethics Commission investigation of Lt. Gov. Mike Huckabor, in concert with office records obtained under the state Freedom of Information Act. shows he used compaign money for prohibited purposes.

For example, a summary of the Ethics Commission fladings thowed that Huckabee claimed $1,573 in travel expenses in lune and July of 1995. Under state law, money raised post-election was supposed to be used "solely" to retire dobt from the 1994 campaign.

But Huckaber's office calendar, ebsained by the Firmer under the FOI, shows 3404 of the travel manary pold to fly Huckaber to the Pink Tomato Festival in Warren.

Subappen; charges to the campaign for July 4-13 covered Huckabee's travcls to the Piggon July 4th picale, the Pangbura July 4th parade and an appaarsace at Arkanaas Governor's School in Comun; among other typisal public appearances

Hocksber contends that breads those appearances were political—"maintaining constituent contact" was how he described it to the Ethics Commission—they thoush be reimburable agas if they were only vaguely rateted to campaign fund-raising. The Ethics Cemmission indicated it wasn't inclined to upon the door to such practices.

HEADLINE: PRYOR'S SEAT ATTRACTS FULL CANDIDATE FIELD DEMOCRATS HARDIN,

BRYANT ALREADY ON STUMP

BYLINE: RACHEL O'NEAL, Democrat-Gazette Capitol Bureau

BODY:

It's a long time until the first Tuesday in November 1996.

But state Sen. Lu Hardin, D-Russellville, already is on the campaign trail, trying to earn name recognition among voters and pick up seed money.

Hardin is the only person to have formally announced that he will run for the seat being given up next year by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark. Right behind Hardin at community picnics, in coffee shops and at civic club luncheons are several unannounced candidates who are all but certain to enter the race.

Hardin, who has served in the Legislature since 1983, announced in early May that he would run for Pryor's seat. He has raised about $ 122,000 in contributions for a race many political observers think will take at least $ 2 million to win.

Hardin has taken a leave of absence from his job as a business professor at Arkansas Tech University in Russellville to run full time. He also is a lawyer.

"I'm enjoying it," Hardin said last week. "This is hard work but a good experience. The campaign has become a family affair."

Hardin, 43, frequently is accompanied to events by his wife, Mary. His son, 17-year-old Scooter, often drives his father. His daughter, 10-year-old Mallory, sometimes is along for the ride.

With seven victories in seven statewide races since 1976, Attorney General Winston Bryant, 56, is viewed as the front-runner for the Democratic nomination. Bryant filed the necessary paperwork in June to run for the < Senate, > but he won't formally announce his candidacy until early next year.

"I'm satisfied with the position I'm in," said Bryant, who first was elected attorney general in 1990 and overwhelmingly was re-elected to a second four-year term in November 1994. "The race is still a long way off. But this is a big race, and there will be a lot of attention focused on it. It is going to take a lot of time and energy."

Bryant said major fund-raising events will come later. Still, almost $ 100,000 in contributions has flowed in. The attorney general attends parades and festivals across the state on weekends and holidays.

On the Republican side, it is a case of waiting to see what Lt. Gov. < Mike > < Huckabee > of Texarkana will do. Huckabee, 39, is getting ready to form an exploratory committee.

"I'm in no red-hot hurry to meet a deadline," Huckabee said. "We're going to start the process of getting papers filed and opening an account during the next few weeks."

Huckabee won a July 1993 special election for lieutenant governor, becoming the first Republican elected in a statewide race since 1980. He was re-elected in November to a full four-year term.

Huckabee said he decided to form an exploratory committee now because of the "incredible" response he has received to letters sent to Republicans across the state asking if he should run for the < Senate. >

"There is more than enough time to make a decision," he said, "but part of the task is to see what level of financial support is out there. ... Should something happen, there is not only an opportunity for me to give money back to those who have contributed, but more importantly there is time for anyone else who wants to run to get in the race."

Huckabee is watching with interest as Gov. Jim Guy Tucker defends himself against a three-count felony indictment. Should Tucker resign, Huckabee would move up to governor and probably come under pressure from many Arkansans to devote full time to that job.

Other Republicans appear ready to jump into the < Senate > race should Huckabee decide not to run.

Asa Hutchinson, a Fort Smith lawyer and chairman of the Arkansas Republican Party, is considered a likely candidate if Huckabee doesn't get in. Hutchinson and Huckabee both have run losing races against Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark. Hutchinson received 38 percent of the vote against Bumpers in 1986 and Huckabee received 40 percent against Bumpers in 1992.

Former U.S. Attorney Chuck Banks of Little Rock and former state Sen. Steve Luelf of Mountain Home also are mentioned as potential Republican candidates.

Banks, 48, ran unsuccessfully for Congress in the 1st District in 1982, losing to former Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark.

Luelf, who served in the state < Senate > from 1985-94, said he will consider a race if Huckabee doesn't run. But Luelf, who finished second in last year's three-man GOP gubernatorial primary behind Sheffield Nelson, a Little Rock lawyer, said he's more interested in making another gubernatorial race in 1998.

"It depends on the circumstances," said Luelf, 53. "I am not actively pursuing it. If number of people mink I need to run, I would consider it. It really depends on <Mike Huckabee. > He would be our strongest candidate."

With Republicans in control of Congress, Huckabee said it is "important for everyone in Arkansas to have at least one person in that chamber who is in the majority party and can deal with the leadership. Nothing would be worse than to be irrelevant."

That, of course, assumes the GOP retains control of the < Senate > in the November 1996 elections.

Expected to join Hardin and Bryant in the Democratic field are two other lawyers, Sandy McMath of Little Rock and Bill Bristow of Jonesboro.

During the past year, McMath, 53, has visited voters in 55 of the state's 75 counties. He has even had a slick brochure printed to tout his accomplishments as a trial lawyer and author. The only thing missing in the brochure is a reference to which office he is seeking. In fact, it doesn't even mention a campaign.

McMath is the son of former Gov. Sid McMath, who served from 1949-52.

The brochure calls Sandy McMath a "relentless defender of people's rights. While his practice is based in Little Rock, his work is seen and felt throughout Arkansas and the nation."

It mentions his support of term limits and a balanced-budget amendment.

McMath said that even though he hasn't formally entered the race, he needed a brochure because he had been passing out business cards. People wanted something more descriptive, he said. McMath said he will make his final decision after Labor Day.

"You need to talk to people at the local level about what their thoughts are," McMath said. "You need to see if your philosophy is in keeping with their needs."

McMath classifies himself as a populist Democrat from the "Andrew Jackson-Harry Truman" school of politics.

In his brochure, McMath writes: "We once called Arkansas the Bear State, a name befitting its greatness. For 25 years, I fought like a grizzly bear in the courtroom. My battle has been for Arkansas people and their families. It has been against injustice and corruption. I've only just begun."

Bristow, 44, has told friends he will run, although he's not prepared to make a formal announcement. Bristow characterizes himself as a fiscal conservative.

"We are continuing to borrow from our children and grandchildren, and we have to stop," he said last week.

Bristow is well-known in the legal community. He represented former Attorney General Steve Clark, who was convicted of theft in 1990. Bristow also represented Neal Ainley of Perryville, the former Perry County Bank president who pleaded guilty earlier this year to misdemeanor charges brought by the Whitewater independent counsel, Kenneth Starr.

Many Democrats think the strongest primary challenge to Bryant would be presented by state Sen. Mike Beebe of Searcy. Beebe, 48, spent part of June calling potential supporters. Now, friends say, he is talking to family members about a race.

"Most of what I have done in the past month has been trying to resolve the personal aspects," Beebe said.

Beebe said he has been approached by "major" consultants who were "extraordinarily sharp" and persuasive. The consultants, he said, urged him to enter the race.

HEADLINE: <HUCKABEE> DIGS OUT OF DEBT TUCKER STILL FIGHTS EXPANDING RED INK

BYLINE: NOEL OMAN, Democrat-Gazette Capitol Bureau

BODY:

Lt. Gov. Mike < Huckabee > of Texarkana is not the only Arkansas elected official who carried a campaign debt into 1995. Gov. Jim Guy Tucker's 1994 campaign organization continued to raise and spend large amounts of money, too.

<Huckabee, > the lone statewide Republican officeholder, has been under intense scrutiny by the media in recent weeks for raising $ 137,650 to pay off a debt he said had grown to $ 35,560 by early this year.

<Huckabee> asked the <state Ethics Commission> to investigate finance reports for his 1994 re-election campaign. On Thursday, the commission took no action, saying it could find only minor discrepancies.

Tucker, a Democrat, also continued to pay large bills with his 1994 campaign account. Tucker's debt was $ 104,951 by last month. By that time, < Huckabee > had paid off his 1994 debt.

Almost half of the Tucker campaign's expenditures in the past year have gone to the Little Rock law firm where John Haley is a partner. Haley was indicted June 7 along with Tucker by a federal grand jury at Little Rock.

State law prohibits candidates from raising money more than two years before their next election except to retire campaign debts. The law allows a candidate to raise enough money to cover "reasonable" fund-raising expenses.

But "reasonable" is open to interpretation.

The government watchdog group Common Cause of Arkansas became interested not only in < Huckabee's > high rate of spending in the months following the 1994 campaign but also in the inability to trace exactly how < Huckabee > spent money from his campaign account, especially when it came to travel.

<Huckabee> insists he has complied with campaign finance laws, and the Ethics Commission agreed. <Huckabee> said he had to spend money to make money and that critics were motivated by partisan politics.

"I'm becoming increasingly used to the idea of being held to a different standard because I'm in the minority party," < Huckabee > said Friday. "It's unfortunate that people would try to use the < state Ethics Commission > as a political weapon. That's an abuse of what the Ethics Commission was created for."

He said Democratic officeholders have not been subjected to the same level of scrutiny by reporters and Common Cause officials.

<Huckabee> is expected to be the Republican nominee next year for the seat being given up by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark. Arkansas voters have never elected a Republican to the U.S. Senate, but several polls have shown <Huckabee> with a sizable lead over potential Democratic contenders.

Through last month, when he formally announced his Senate candidacy, <Huckabee > used his lieutenant governor's campaign account to pay off bills on three credit cards. Although the credit-card payments were listed as travel expenses, the expenses were not itemized as to exact flights, meals, etc.

For instance, <Huckabee's > 1994 re-election campaign reported $ 30,204 in expenses for July 1995. More than $ 4,000 of that was listed as travel expenses.

In the part of the report where travel expenses were itemized, the campaign broke down expenditures this way: $ 361 in travel expenses by Brenda Turner, a campaign aide; $ 350 to a charge card identified as CNB; and $ 3,394 to pay off a MasterCard bill.

< Huckabee > was reimbursed another $ 1,057 for expenses the report did not disclose.

<Huckabee> said part of the 1995 expenditures have gone to pay off bills for expenses incurred before the Nov. 8, 1994, election.

His campaign's July expenses included bills totaling more than $3,000 from four telephone companies: $2,052 to General Telephone Co.; $245 to Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.; $681 to Century Cellunet; and $324 to AT&T.

The <Huckabee> campaign also spent more than $5,000 on office supplies and printing costs in July. For office supplies, the campaign reported spending $408 at Office Source of Texarkana. Printing expenses included $2,893 at Griffith Enterprises in Texarkana. The campaign spent $320 with the U.S. Postal Service. Another $255 in printing costs went to Sutton Press, for which no address was listed.

Few Arkansas campaigns turn in itemized expenditure lists that go into more detail than the < Huckabee > campaign's reports.

While < Huckabee's > campaign debt from 1994 has disappeared, Tucker's has grown.

In a January quarterly report, Tucker reported a debt of $86,740. In his October quarterly report, the governor listed a debt of $104,951.

In the last four quarterly reports, the Tucker campaign reported spending $ 98,049 and raising $ 146,912. Tucker aides said most of the expenditures were for pre-election expenses. The July quarterly report listed a $ 25,466 payment to Austin-Sheinkopf Ltd., a political consulting firm Tucker used during are 1994 campaign.

But about half of the expenditures -- $ 45,283 -- went to the Little Rock law firm Arnold Grobmyer & Haley, where John Haley is a partner. The April quarterly report listed the payment under "research."

The Whitewater grand jury charged in June that Tucker, Haley and a former business partner named William Marks were involved in a sham 1987 Texas bankruptcy. Haley was Tucker's longtime tax attorney.

U.S. District Judge Henry Woods of Little Rock quashed the indictment, ruling that Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr was outside his jurisdiction when he asked the grand jury to bring the charges. Woods' ruling is on appeal to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Tucker said the campaign payments were for time Haley and other employees of the firm spent responding to campaign-related media inquiries. Tucker's Republican opponent. Little Rock lawyer Sheffield Nelson, repeatedly tied Tucker to the Whitewater affair before the election.

Compared with < Huckabee's > reports, Tucker's 1995 reports reflect only a small amount of travel-related expenses ($ 7.231) and telephone expenses ($ 3,068).

IT WAS A BAD WEEK FOR.

PRESIDENT CLINTON, who, a judge decided, may be subpoensed to testify as a delense witness in the estiminal trial of Gay. Jim Guy Tucker and Jim and Susan McDougal. On the other hand, we like Clinton's chances when it's his word against David Hale.

LT. GOV. MINE HUCKABEE, who wasn't man enough to face the music when the state Ethics Commission found a bost of irregularities in his 1994 campaign finance reports. Denied his small alibi—blaming Democrats—by a bipartisan 5-0 vote, Huckabee went into hilding for four days, then emerged to whine so his favorite journalitis that he was a victum of a "rague" law.

The MOT SPRINGS BOARD OF DIRECTORS, which refered so vote on Director Charles Oxford's resolution denouncing proposals to legalize casinos in the Spa. The wimps take they'd rather beat from voters first.

WHITEWATER PROSECUTOR KENNETH STARR, caught redhanded. He had taid he didn't sty to dissuade state prosecution of David Hale. Documents showed he lied.

Huckabee gets a bipartisan scolding

Ethics panel finds "inaccurate" records, "unreasonable" expenses.

BY MAX BRANCLEY

LacThe bottom line is this is presty laury househookkeeping."

The speaker was Casdi Russell of Fort Smith, a member of the state Ethics Commission, as it reviewed staff findings on Lt. Gov. Mille Huckahoe's fond-raining in the months after his November 1994 m-elec-

Russell's comment was significant. A one-cione Hockabee campaign worker, she joined in two 5-0 commission votes that effectively sent the message that Huckabee had not complied with campaign finance laws. Joining in the vote was Rus Looney, a Little Rock lawyer and Huckabee appointed to the commission, a circumstance that deprived Huckabee, a circumstance that the was a victim of Democratic partisant.

Because to formal lawestigation and been undertaken, commission rules greekeded a vote on a formal finding of a law violation. But the commission issued two advisory opinions: I that Huckston's finance reports were "incorrect"—full of errors and missuatements; and 2) that he find raised an unreasonable amount. $91,000, so pay a campaign debt that proved to be only about $17,000. Such as effort was farelly soccessry. The review showed Huckstone spent only about $1,000 on two fund-raisers, one by the campaign and one by the soft drick industry, that resided far more than necessary to relire the debt, about $40,000.

The law says candidates who and campaigns with debt reay raise money "solely" to retire the debt. A commission opinion allowe candidates to spend "reasonable" amounts toward administrative costs of debt retirement.

The commission's declaton that Huckainer support over the line was a political aethack for a fuscal conservative who expects to be the Republican norminee for U.S. Senste this year.

The nutcome was also emburracing on account of Hockston's earlier pronouncements. In a campaign letter, he had bitterly criticized "junkyard journalists" who raised questions about his campaign reports. That letter said that his campaign finance disclosarce were more extensive chan any candidate";. He and his wall had repeatedly told reporters that he had receipt to support all his expenses (they didn's). He also had teld the Ethles Commission that he "firmly believed" all funds had been raised, upone and reported legally. The Ethics Commission firmly disagreed, Huckabre, who had asked the commission to look into his recurds as a way to dembat negative media escention, watn't wholly cooperative in the lavestigation. The Relics Commission was weakle to phonomy his records. Staff members were able to take only hand-written notice, a premote to take only hand-written notice, a premote that effectively stymied graininged study.

A nine-hour series of the records by commission staff errord up embarrationess enough.

Hickahee charged his campaign $1,500 in 1995 for a trip to Hawaii in 1994. He pays the trip, to make a speech in support of another Republican conditions, was apposed to be estimated, but he cover got the readesy, it produced nothing in the way of money for debt redressman, in any case.

He charged in 1993, as a 1994 campaign expense, $2,000 for an August stip by him and exempling aids Brenda Turner to Wash, ington. The telp, undertaken in part to explore his Sensie prospects and in part to talk to political commitme Dick Marris, also produced no direct 1994 compring contributions, other than forgiveness of a debt to Morris, which accomingly could have been obtained by telephone.

The Ethics Constitution also found that Huckabee used money executivity raised to pay off 1994 dicht to make trips around Arkanste in early 1993, during the sime dee Arkansas legislature was in secsion. This is a time when compaign feed-raising is prohibited by law. Huckabee said he needed to make such appearances, often in Republican Party dinners, so incopus good public relations with people who might give him money later,

Also during the legislative section, Huckaboe kept Breads Turner amployed full-time to run a political office in Tunarkana, utilinately paying her more than $10,000 for the work. She told investigators that no then $50 percent of her since could be said to be directly related to setting campaign debt, the rest was spent on political work such as scheduling Harkshot speaking appearances.

The investigation also found that a reparant $4,166 reinstrument of "condidate" expusses in 1995 octually was a cash payment to minute this wife, James, for miles driven during the 1994, at a rate of 30 owns a mile.

"I'd drive around all day for 30 cours a mile. I'll stars right now," said Commissioners Troy Burris, Commissioners Engene Hunt and Norson Wilson also oridized the rate ("ridiculous" and "sareasonoble" was: Wilson's words).

It marks the third time the Hackabae furally has drawn each from companys funds, a legal shough politically problematic practice. In his 1992 company for Senare, he paid hisraell, through a personal communications company, for campaign work. In his 1993 race for Hassenant governor, he paid his wife a salary.

Huckshee's assency, Frank Arey of Conway, had hoped to make the case that Hockshee had operand no differently than

BODY:

Lt. Gov. Mike < Huckabee > of Texarkana is not the only Arkansas elected official who carried a campaign debt into 1995. Gov. Jim Guy Tucker's 1994 campaign organization continued to raise and spend large amounts of money, too.

<Huckabee, > the lone statewide Republican officeholder, has been under intense scrutiny by the media in recent weeks for raising $ 137,650 to pay off a debt he said had grown to $ 35,560 by early this year.

<Huckabee> asked the <state Ethics Commission> to investigate finance reports for his 1994 re-election campaign. On Thursday, the commission took no action, saying it could find only minor discrepancies.

Tucker, a Democrat, also continued to pay large bills with his 1994 campaign account. Tucker's debt was $ 104,951 by last month. By that time, < Huckabee > had paid off his 1994 debt.

Almost half of the Tucker campaign's expenditures in the past year have gone to the Little Rock law firm where John Haley is a partner. Haley was indicted June 7 along with Tucker by a federal grand jury at Little Rock.

State law prohibits candidates from raising money more than two years before their next election except to retire campaign debts. The law allows a candidate to raise enough money to cover "reasonable" fund-raising expenses.

But "reasonable" is open to interpretation.

The government watchdog group Common Cause of Arkansas became interested not only in < Huckabee's > high rate of spending in the months following the 1994 campaign but also in the inability to trace exactly how < Huckabee > spent money from his campaign account, especially when it came to travel.

<Huckabee> insists he has complied with campaign finance laws, and the Ethics Commission agreed. <Huckabee> said he had to spend money to make money and that critics were motivated by partisan politics.

"I'm becoming increasingly used to the idea of being held to a different standard because I'm in the minority party," < Huckabee > said Friday. "It's unfortunate that people would try to use the < state Ethics Commission > as a political weapon. That's an abuse of what the Ethics Commission was created for."

He said Democratic officeholders have not been subjected to the same level of scrutiny by reporters and Common Cause officials.

<Huckabee> is expected to be the Republican nominee next year for the seat being given up by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark. Arkansas voters have never elected a Republican to the U.S. Senate, but several polls have shown <Huckabee> with a sizable lead over potential Democratic contenders.

Through last month, when he formally announced his Senate candidacy, < Huckabee > used his lieutenant governor's campaign account to pay off bills on three credit cards. Although the credit-card payments were listed as travel expenses, the expenses were not itemized as to exact flights, meals, etc.

For instance, < Huckabee's > 1994 re-election campaign reported $ 30,204 in expenses for July 1995. More than $ 4,000 of that was listed as travel expenses.

In the part of the report where travel expenses were itemized, the campaign broke down expenditures this way: $ 361 in travel expenses by Brenda Turner, a campaign aide; $ 350 to a charge card identified as CNB; and $ 3,394 to pay off a MasterCard bill.

<Huckabee> was reimbursed another $ 1,057 for expenses the report did not disclose.

<Huckabee> said part of the 1995 expenditures have gone to pay off bills for expenses incurred before the Nov. 8, 1994, election.

His campaign's July expenses included bills totaling more than $3,000 from four telephone companies: $2,052 to General Telephone Co.; $245 to Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.; $681 to Century Cellunet; and $324 to AT&T.

The < Huckabee > campaign also spent more than $ 5,000 on office supplies and printing costs in July. For office supplies, the campaign reported spending $ 408 at Office Source of Texarkana. Printing expenses included $ 2,893 at Griffith Enterprises in Texarkana. The campaign spent $ 320 with the U.S. Postal Service. Another $ 255 in printing costs went to Sutton Press, for which no address was listed.

Few Arkansas campaigns turn in itemized expenditure lists that go into more detail than the < Huckabee > campaign's reports.

While < Huckabee's > campaign debt from 1994 has disappeared, Tucker's has grown.

In a January quarterly report, Tucker reported a debt of $ 86,740. In his October quarterly report, the governor listed a debt of $ 104,951.

In the last four quarterly reports, the Tucker campaign reported spending $ 98,049 and raising $ 146,912. Tucker aides said most of the expenditures were for pre-election expenses. The July quarterly report listed a $ 25,466 payment to Austin-Sheinkopf Ltd., a political consulting firm Tucker used during the 1994 campaign.

But about half of the expenditures -- $ 45,283 -- went to the Little Rock law firm Arnold Grobmyer & Haley, where John Haley is a partner. The April quarterly report listed the payment under "research."

The Whitewater grand jury charged in June that Tucker, Haley and a former business partner named William Marks were involved in a sham 1987 Texas bankruptcy. Haley was Tucker's longtime tax attorney.

U.S. District Judge Henry Woods of Little Rock quashed the indictment, ruling that Whitewater independent counsel Kenneth Starr was outside his jurisdiction when he asked the grand jury to bring the charges. Woods' ruling is on appeal to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Tucker said the campaign payments were for time Haley and other employees of the firm spent responding to campaign-related media inquiries. Tucker's Republican opponent, Little Rock lawyer Sheffield Nelson, repeatedly tied Tucker to the Whitewater affair before the election.

Compared with < Huckabee's > reports, Tucker's 1995 reports reflect only a small amount of travel-related expenses ($ 7,231) and telephone expenses ($ 3,068).

BODY:

A review of Lt. Gov. Mike < Huckabee's > campaign finance reports led members of the < state Ethics Commission > on Friday to discuss stricter scrutiny of postelection campaign contributions.

Randy Wright, a lawyer for the Ethics Commission, told the five commissioners that more documentation is needed before a final report can be issued on <Huckabee's> fund-raising activities after his November 1994 re-election as lieutenant governor.

Frank Arey of Conway, < Huckabee's > lawyer, said commission staff members have the lieutenant governor's permission to inspect records at his campaign headquarters in Texarkana.

The commission's inquiry began at < Huckabee's > request after the lieutenant governor came under criticism for raising $ 137,000 to retire a debt of about $ 35,000 from his 1994 campaign. State law prohibits candidates from raising money more than two years before a campaign except to retire debts from previous campaigns. < Huckabee > is not up for re-election until 1998.

A 1991 commission opinion said surplus funds could be used by candidates for the "reasonable expense of raising and administering the past debt fund."

<Huckabee> maintains that he legally raised, spent and reported all funds linked to his 1994 campaign organization. He is seeking the seat being given up next year by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

< Huckabee > is the only statewide Republican officeholder.

Also at < Huckabee's > request, the commission is reviewing campaign finance reports from the other six statewide constitutional officers.

Wright said the commission is asking Secretary of State Sharon Priest for documentation of almost $6,000 she raised after the election. Priest, who ended her campaign with a small surplus, said she raised the money to pay bills that came in late. She said she has about $3,000 in her account and is waiting on direction from the commission on how the money may be spent.

Amanda Nixon White, the Ethics Commission director, said the inquiry into <Huckabee's> reports has identified "six problem areas."

Discussion of those areas was cut off when Eugene Hunt, a commissioner from Pine Bluff, said it would be unfair to < Huckabee > "to give an interim blow-by-blow of what's going on" before the investigation has been completed.

Wright, however, already had complained that < Huckabee > was too vague in explaining bills paid with credit cards. State reporting forms allow candidates to avoid specifics in many instances.

Rita Looney, a Little Rock lawyer who serves on the commission, said candidates should be required to "up their standards" for itemizing expenses.

State law requires candidates to itemize expenses of more than $ 100, but the law does not address how to handle multiple expenditures that are covered in a single payment, such as a credit-card installment.

On the subject of postelection contributions, White recommended that the commission subject contributions to "strict scrutiny" to show they are related to reducing a debt.

"I'm in favor of a law that says thou shalt not raise a nickel after the election," Hunt said.

Expenditures should be itemized rather than lumped into categories such as miscellaneous expenses, White said. She said listing expenditures to credit-card companies, as <Huckabee> often has done, "is not sufficient itemization."

White recommended that the commission encourage candidates who end their campaigns with debts to avoid incurring such additional post-election bills as personnel and office expenses. < Huckabee > maintained a campaign staff member after the November 1994 election.

Norton Wilson of North Little Rock, the Ethics Commission chairman, said the commission should consider requesting legislation "to cover up some of these holes that glare at us."

The Associated Press contributed to this article.

Huckabee's '95 fund raising wasn't reasonable, panel says

BY ELIZABETH CALDWELL Democrati Gazario Capasi Surany

LL Gov. Mike Huckabee's 1995 fund-raising activities were not "reasonable" based on the size of his 1994 campaiga debt, the Arkansa Ethies Commission concluded Thursday.

The commission determined that Huckabee raised $91,825 to pay off a debt of only $16,996. But commissioners stupped short of ruling that Huckabee violated state eampaign finance laws.

"You have never declared this to be an official investigation," Randy Wright, the Ethics Commission attorncy, told the five commissioners.

Ruckabee's campaign account was used to pay off credit-card debts and fund a trip to Hawaii.

"The Huckabee campaign did not focus on paying the debt that was listed." said Eugene Hunt of Pine Bluff, an Ethics Commission member apparatus in place.

Arey said the Huckabee campaign "sought the advice and counsel of the commission throughout the election" and "went to great lengths to follow their counsel as well as the letter and spirit of the rains. We are surprised and disappointed by this new interpretation."

Huckabee could not be reached for comment.

Huchabee won a special election for lieutenant governor in July 1933 to become the first Republican elected to statewide office in Arkantas since November 1980 when Frank White upset then-Gov. Ill Clinton.

Huckabes was elected in November 1894 to a full four-year term. He defeated then state Sen. Charlie Cole Chaffin, D-Beston.

The lieutenant governor, a Southern Baptist minister and professional speaker from Texarkana, is expected to be the Republican nominee this year for the seal being given up by Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

State law prohibits candidates from raising funds during a legislative session, 30 days before a regular session and 30 days after a regular session. The 1995 regular session began Jan. 9 and ended April 7.

The law also probibits a candidate from raising money more than two years before an election except to ratire a debt.

A three-month review of Huckaboe's campaign records began when the lieutenant governor asked the Ethics Commission to examine his reports and those of other elected officials. Questions about Huchabee's fund-raising activities had been raised by the modia.

A 1991 Ethics Commission opinion said campaign Arads can be used for the "reasonable expense of raising and administering the part debt fund." Huckabee has insisted that he raised, spent and reported all funds legally.

"It is as though there were additional debts created to justify additional fund raising." Hunt said.

The commission also completed its review of campaign finance reports filed by Democratic Secretary of State Sharon Priest.

"Unlike we had originally believed, Sharon Priest did not end her campaign in surplus but in debt," a stall report said.

Priest now has a surplus of $3,886 and has asked the commission for advice on how the money can be used. The commission decided to study the issue.

In the Huckabee case, commission members voted unanimously to issue an advisory opinion notifying the lieutenam governor what he did wrong. The opinion's wording will be dis cussed and voted on a the commis ston's next meeting.

The commission found that amended reports that stuckaber submitted after the inquiry begat were inaccurate, including report ed payments on credit cards that had been wided.

"I agree we made some pretty bad bookkeeping mistakes," Arey told commission members.

Huckabee's original report listed a campaign debt of $35,560 from 1994. Ethics Commission, staff members determined that Huckabee owed $27,795 at the end of 1994 in addition to $7,300 in reimburse ments due to Huckabee and his wife, Janet, for a loan, utility bills and travel expenses.

Some debts were later forgiven bringing the total debt to $16,996. The largest outstanding debt was a $15,000 fee to political consultant Dick Morris of Connecticut.

Arey said Morris kept putting of seceptance of the payment until he forgave the debt Aug. 1. Morris, who is now advising President Clinton, didn't want to accept additional payments from Republican clients, Arey said.

The Ethics Commission investigation found that Huckabee had raised enough funds by May 1995 to pay off the debt but instead used part of the money for travel to political functions. The payments included one for a May 1994 trip to Hawaii. Huckabee was not reimbursed by the compaign for the trip until the following year.

The 1994 campaign acrount also was used to pay for trips taken by Huckabee in June, July and August 1995.

Amanda Nixon White, director of the Ethics Commission. Said Buckabee told her that Republican officials in Vashington had promised to pay the $1,500 for his Hawaitan trip to support a GOP candidate in the state but never sent the moner.

Bucksbee listed large payments to Visa, MasterCard and Discover for travel expenses. Commission staff members were told that Huckabee paid the expenses himself and asked the campaign to reimburse him by writing checks directly to credit-card companies. Credit-card expenses often were not itemized.

THE WEEK

FEB. 1-7, 1994

IT WAS A GOOD WEEK FOR.

STATE INSURANCE COMMISSIONER LEE DOUGLASS, who said to wroted to see David Bale prosourced for alleged insurance law violations, so matter what Whitewater Prosecutor Kenneth Starr might think. Douglass, a former prosecutor, properly acted that he raised the issue meanly every years ago and the violations have no relationship to federal charges for which Surr his promised Hale easy meatment. At last, courage. The hot points now belongs to Prosecutor Mark Sordole.

LITTLE ROCK SCHOOL SUPER-INTENDENT HENRY WILLIAMS, in danger of being axed from his current job, who was tonoun as a finalist to be superintendent in the larger St. Louis achieved district Good for Little Rock, too.

IT WAS A BAD WEEK FOR...

PRESIDENT CLINTON, who, a judge decided, may be subyvensed to textify as a defense witness in the criminal misl of Gay. Jim Gay Tucker and Ilm and Susan McDougal. On the other hand, we like Climon's chances when it's his word against David Hale.

LT. GOV. MINE HUCKABEE, who sum 't must enough to face the music when the state Ethics Commission found a bost of irregularities in his 1994 emopoign funance reports. Denied his usual alibi—blaming Democrats—by a bipartisan 5-0 vote, Huckabee went into hidding for four days, then errerged to whine to his favorite journalists that he was a victim of a "vague" law.

The MOT SPRINGS BOARD OF DIRECTORS, which refused to vote on Director Charles Oxford's resolutions of denouncing proposals to legalize comings in the Spn. The wineps said they'd rather bear from voters first.

WHITEWATER PROSECUTOR KENNETH STARR, caught redhanded. He had said he didn't try to disease state prosecution of David Hale. Documents showed he lied.

SAM DASH, Renneth Start's alleged athics advisor, who peddled a line of ball to the press to cover his own heavy-banded intervention against then David Hale prosecution. No But Association rule, despite what Dash and, troquires the state to default on a prosecution because the feds don't want a jury to know what a dirfung their key witness in.

Huckabee gets a bipartisan scolding

Ethics panel finds "inaccurate" records, "unreasonable" expenses.

BY MAX BEAUTILET

"The bottom line is this is premy longy bookkneping."

The speaker was Candi Russell of Fort Smith, a member of the user Ethics Commission, as it reviewed staff findings on La. Gov. Mike Huckaboe's fund-raising in the months after his Noverober 1994 st-election.

Russell's commont was significant. A one-time Huckahee campaign worker, she joined in 1900 5-0 commission votes that effectively sent the message that Huckahee had not complied with campaign finance laws. Joining in the vote was Rus Looney, a Little Rock lawyer and Huckahee apoisse to the commission, a circumstance that deprived Huckahee of the argument that he was a victim of Democratic particans.

Because no formal investigation had been undertaken, commission rales precluded a vote on a formal finding of a law violation. But the commission issued two advisory opinions: 1) that Huckabes's finance reports were "incorrect"—full of errors and missuements; and 2) that he had raised an unreasonable amount. $91,000, to pay a campaign debt that proved to be only about $17,000. Such an effort was hardly necessary. The review showed Huckabes spent only about $1,000 on two fund-raisers, one by the campaign and one by the soft drink industry, that raised for more than necessary to retire the debt, about $40,000.

The law says conditions who and compaigns with dobt may raise money "solely" to retire the dobt. A commission opinion allow candidates to spend "reasonable" amounts toward administrative costs of dobt retirement.

The commission's decision that Huckshoe supperd over the line was a political setback for a fiscal conservative who expects to be the Republican nominee for U.S. Serate this

The outcome was also emberrassing on account of Hocksbee's earlier pronouncement. In a campaign letter, he had bitterly criticized "junkyard journalists" who raised questions about his campaign reports. That letter said that his campaign finance disclesures were more extensive than any candidate's. He and his staff had repressedly told reporters that he had receipts to support all his expenses (deep didn't). He also had told the Ethics Commission that he "firmly believed all funds had been raised, spent and reported legally. The Ethics Commisaion firmly disagreed.

Huckibee, who had asked the commission to look into his records as a way to combat acqueire media acception, wasn't wholly compountive in the lavestigation. The Ethics Commission was unable to phosocopy his records. Staff members were able to take only hand-written notes, a prosest that effectively stymied prolonged study.

A nine-how seview of the records by commission staff arread up contacts seed anough.

Hockshee charged his campaign $1,970 in 1995 for a trip to Hawaii in 1994. He says the trip, to make a apeach in support of another Republican emoliate, was supposed to be eximbarted, but he never got the money. It produced nothing in the way of money for dicht retirement, in any case.

He charged in 1995, as a 1994 campaign, expense, $2,000 for an August one by him and campaign aide Branda Turner to Washington. The selp, undertaken in pure to explore his Senate prospects and in pure to talk to political consultant Dick Merris, also produced to direct 1994 campaign constributions, other than forgiveness of a debt or Merris, which seemingly could have been obtained by telephone.

The Ethics Commission also found that Huckabor used money outensibly raised to pay off 1994 dicht to make trips er ound Arkansas in early 1995, during the tiene the Arkansas legislature was in session. This is a time when compaign fend-raising it prohibited by law. Huckabor said he needed to make such appearances, of our in Republican Parry diamers, to beep up good public relations with people who might give him money later.

Also during the legislative secsion. Huckabee kept Brenda Turner employed full-time to run a political office in Texastenas, ultimately paying her more than $10,000 for the work. She told investigators that on more than $0 percent of her time could be taid to be directly related to retiring campaign debt, the rest was spent on political work such as acheduling Harisabor speaking appearances.

The investigation sits found that a reported $4,166 relimburs executed "Guardidate" expenses in 1995 actually was a cash pryname to reinstance his wife, least, for soline driven during the 1994, at a race of 30 owns a mile.

"I'd drive around all day for 30 cents a state. I'll start right now," said Commissioner Troy Burns. Commissioners Eugene Hunt and Normon Wilson also criticized the rate ("ridiculous" and "narrasonoble" wore Wilson's words).

It marks the third time the Hackabee family less drawn cosh from campnings funds, a legal chough politically problematic practice. In his 1972 campaign for Senate, he paid himself, through a personal communications company, for exampaign work. In his 1993 race for lieureman; governor, he paid his wife a salary.

Huckabec's attorney. Frank Arey of Conway, had hoped to make the cone that Huckabec had operated no differently than Consense 9
